PMAPS 2022 - Call for Tutorials

On behalf of the PMAPS 2022 International Society and the Local Organizing Committee we would like to invite experts in the application of probabilistic methods to power systems to submit proposals for half or full day Tutorials.

Tutorials will take place on Sunday 12th June 2022 from 9am to 5pm. Half day Tutorials will be comprised of two 1.5 hour blocks during the morning or afternoon. Full day Tutorials will be comprised of four 1.5 hour blocks. The content of the Tutorials can be either broad to serve as an introduction to a topic, or deep in order to focus on cutting-edge developments.

If you would like to submit a proposal, please send the information listed below (with attachments if applicable) to the Technical Chair, Dr Robin Preece (robin.preece@manchester.ac.uk) by Wednesday 15th December 2021.

- Tutorial Title.
- Tutorial Organiser (name, affiliation, contact e-mail, and a short CV or link).
- List of Speakers (name, affiliation, contact e-mail, and a short CV or link). It can be only the organiser.
- Abstract. No more than 300 words.
- Length. Half day (two 1.5 hour blocks) or full day (four 1.5 hour blocks).
- Structure. Topics to be addressed in each block.
- Special requirements. Please indicate whether there is any special requirements for the attendees (e.g., attendees need to bring laptops or have specialised software already installed).
- Previous experience. Please state if you have already organized a tutorial on the same or similar topic in a previous conference. Provide details as necessary (e.g., title, year, number of attendees).

Tutorials will be allocated infrastructure (room, AV equipment, etc.) and will be advertised along with the different activities of PMAPS 2022. The organiser (or designated speaker) will be given one (1) free registration for the whole conference. However, it is a requirement that all other speakers register for the conference unless their attendance is limited to the corresponding Tutorial. The PMAPS 2022 conference organisers will not cover travel-related expenses. All income resulting from Tutorial ticket sales goes to PMAPS 2022.

Important Dates:

- Deadline: Wednesday 15th December 2021
- Notification of acceptance: Friday 14th January 2022
- Final tutorial presentation uploads (PPT or PDF): Friday 27th May 2022
